A Word for Mayaville

A west nor mayorine.

Did you ever hear any one say: "Oh Maysville don't grow any," and "She don't keep up with the times?" And didn't you know it was not true weh you heard it? It is true we have not indon't keep up with the times?" And didn't you know it was not true when you heard lit? It is true we have not increased in population as rapidly as we would have liked, but in other and more substantial ways, our progress in a de cade has been such that we have just cause to feel proud. No city of our size can boast of such blocks as those which adorn our business streets, and all of them erected at a comparatively recent date. So long as our branking institutions are full of money, our public debt is not oppressive, we have good schools and public-spirited men who are not straid to lavest their means, we have no fara for Maysville's future. Populations are prose to ebb and flow; good solid progress in finances and architecture are the best evidences of a city's prosperity. tions are proue to ebb and flow; good solid progress in finances and architecture are the best evidences of a city's prosperity. When you hear any of our citteran cam plaining, or any outsiders trying to make the laugh." We have had no fictitious "booms," and a coliar invested in Mayaville real estate has always been a dollar arared. Some of our sister cities of Kentucky can show a greater increase in propulation, but none of them more real progressiveness. We are a prosperous, thriving people, and that we will some day have a city ranking among the foremost in our state we have abundant faith.
